Mr. Peter Steffensen, accompanied by manager Dief, and H. E. King, drove out to the Cunningham's farm on Monday night. He reports meeting a buggy a mile or so out of town in which the driver seemed to have some difficulty in managing the horse. We think, with Mr. Steffensen, that had the driver been paying more attention to the horse and less attention to the car—stars, the horse would have proved more tractable.

Germany Has Blundered Awakening Draws Near

When the history of this Armageddon is written, no matter what its outcome, the world will know that, so far as Germany was concerned, it was a war of miscalculations.

Germany has blundered along the lines. Her own people will come to realize this before long when they do so there will be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

At present they are hopelessly in the dark, drunk with self confidence, they are being dragged deeper and deeper into the uncertainties of world war in the belief that the sword has been forced into the Kaiser's hand.

Germany's miscalculations have been both political and military. They began with the cocksure supposition that the triple entente would not withstand the shock of war. France was held to be unready. Russia was looked upon as on the brink of revolution, both political and industrial. England was thought to be preoccupied with Ulster, and all believed under any circumstances to risk anything in a great continental struggle not directly affecting her. Italy's help was regarded as a foregone conclusion.

The Golden Girl

By Alice and Claude Asquith
Ward, Luck & Co., Limited

The brougham had drawn up Lady (Cressingham) and, presently, after the door had been open for a minute or so, the young man, in the bell, a slight girl, with her cheeks flushed, wrapped about her and who, in the house and sprang lightly into the brougham, settling down by the side of the young man, who began an animated conversation, almost as if she had not seen Harold, who had sat in the seat to make room for her.

"This is my brother, Leslie," she said to him, "and you are my friend, so I need not introduce you."

The girl looked up and with the smile upon her face as captivated as of old—her eyes as brilliant and full of the joy of life. She wore a cream-colored dress in her hair, and there was a cluster of red roses in her hair, and she was looking at him with a smile that was not of Harold's face. Yet, as he had told himself that afternoon, there was a touch, three times as strong, of the aggressive control of his brain had been in, small as it was, and it was not in vain that he had been driven into oblivion—and that by Leslie.

"His hands met, and Harold had been a little longer than was absolutely necessary."

"And so you give me news?" he asked, "there is something to be said."

"There are some rays of hope," he said, "but they are not very bright."

"I am glad to hear that," he said, "but I am not sure that I am not a little disappointed."

"I am glad to hear that," he said, "but I am not sure that I am not a little disappointed."

"I am glad to hear that," he said, "but I am not sure that I am not a little disappointed."

"I am glad to hear that," he said, "but I am not sure that I am not a little disappointed."

"I am glad to hear that," he said, "but I am not sure that I am not a little disappointed."

she had passed through many months of trouble and worry watching three heavy days when she had learned that she was winning Harold's love, and then, after a long and bittered thereby, but rather, made more sympathetic—the Italian word "dolce" character, so well known to her, she had learned that she was not to be married to him as a mere plaything for butterflies.

She could have been very seriously, she had reflected, "or he would not have been so angry with me."

She had said that many tears in her eyes, she had never given credit for it.

GERMANY HAS BLUNDERED

The idea of the Belgian's resistance to Germany's temporary invasion, was hardly considered. That Belgium could offer military opposition worthy of Plevna, never entered Berlin's mind. American sympathy was absolutely counted upon. Its absence is the cruellest disappointment the Kaiser's government has so far suffered.

Its miscalculations in regard to England were perhaps the greatest of all. It counted the idea of an English army, or the idea that Kitchener might suddenly be placed in charge of it. The Germans have been educated by their political professors to believe that a great European war which involved Great Britain, meant the independence of Canada, Australia and South Africa, and revolutions in India and Egypt. The hour of rude awakening has set in. Great soldiers and statesmen warned that the war would produce surprises. They have begun with a vengeance. (Calgary News-Telegram.)

GOOD PLAN TO KEEP THE BOY IN THE FARM

FARMER'S FAMILY IS ORGANIZED INTO A JOINT STOCK CORPORATION

A Far-seeing step has been taken by giving his sons and daughters a stock share in the Real Joint Stock Company.

A family stock has solved the old problem of how to keep the farm by organizing his nine sons and daughters into a joint stock company, dividing the stock of his 1,800-acre farm among them, as though it were fifty hundred-acre farms, each of them.

The father, John McCallum, was elected president of the farm corporation by the vote of all the stockholders, the eldest son, general manager, and another son secretary and treasurer.

One son was made superintendent of the hog department, all full stockholders. Another son was chosen for the horse and sheep department. The other sons and daughters were made superintendents of some division of the farm work, and given supreme authority in his or her department.

"I thought the matter over for a long time," said the far-seeing stockholder, "and I decided to divide the farm into ten divisions, each with a son or daughter as its head. I have divided the farm into ten divisions, each with a son or daughter as its head. I have divided the farm into ten divisions, each with a son or daughter as its head."

The directors held daily meetings, and the family breakfast table was the place where the work of the day is reported. The family breakfast table was the place where the work of the day is reported. The family breakfast table was the place where the work of the day is reported.

BASEBALL

OYEN AT YOUNGSTOWN

The second game of the best of three series was played at Youngstown on Tuesday evening and resulted in a win for Oyen. Having previously won here last week Oyen win the series and the third game will not be played.

The series was the result of a wager between Mr. Steffensen of the Alberta Hotel and Mr. Howell of the hotel at Youngstown, who had to play second base for their respective teams. The Oyen team lined up as follows:

Freer	rf
Charbonneau	1st
Dalton	p
Quinn	c
Cunningham	ss
McDonald	cf
Horn	3rd
Thygeson	2nd
Steffensen	inf

The score by inning—
Oyen 2 2 0 1 0 5
Youngstown 0 0 1 0 2 3

Dalton was in great form and pitched a hitless game. He drove out a nice three bagger among his other hits. Errors by the infield owing to bad ground let in three runs.

Pete Steffensen showed surprising speed on bases and beat out a nice bunt in the fourth. He played errorless ball on second.

Horn was back at his old position where he has done good work all season.

Freddy was accused of playing to the gallery by the Youngstown boys. Tut! Tut!! Freddy.
